

Online Wake Up Service Takes It To The Next Level

One of the internet's original wake up services, WakeUpLand.com, steps up their service to customers.

Jupiter, FL (PRWEB) June 15, 2006 -- Born in a dorm room at the University Of Central Florida back in 1999, WakeUpLand.com was created from the ground up by students David Batchelor & Chris Casale. After realizing there were no online wake up services they decided to put it to the test and setup WakeUpLand.com, manually taking orders and doing the wake up calls themselves. After too many early mornings & sleepless nights they decided to take it to the next level and automate the wake up calls. Since then WakeUpLand.com has helped thousands of people who wanted a different way to get out of bed in the mornings than the usual alarm clock.

Now after 5 years WakeUpLand has taken their service to the next level with a completely redesigned website and user management system. Users are now able to login and edit the wake up call times instantly through WakeUpLand.com, making the service 100% automated. They offer one time calls which is great for those important meetings, flights, and can't miss appointments; as well as a monthly service that is the perfect substitution for your old alarm clock. Calls can be made to any number in the US and Canada, including cell phones which is great for people who travel or don't sleep near their alarm clock each night. With even more features coming up such as daily horoscopes and morning weather reports tied into the calls, WakeUpLand.com will continue being a leader in the wake up call industry.
